OUR MISSION
The National Recreation Foundation is a nonprofit charitable foundation administered by a Board of Trustees composed of citizen members. The Foundation supports the development of recreation programs and facilities that promote and advance the Foundation’s mission. On November 6, 2010, the Board of Trustees adopted the following mission statement:

"NRF is dedicated to enhancing the role of recreation as a positive force in improving the quality of life of youth. It does this by investing in recreation programs directed at those who are economically, physically or mentally disadvantaged."
LOOKING BACK A DECADE

The National Recreation Foundation has grown dramatically in the past decade and is now helping many thousands of children all across the United States in accordance with our mission. For example:

- The dollar amount of our annual grants has doubled in this period. In 2014 we granted about $1.9 million to 47 grantees.
- The total number of grantees each year has almost doubled over the decade.
- Several programs we have funded have grown from regional to national efforts and are now serving countless more children.
- The main grant growth has been in our larger Special Grants, where the individual grant size is much larger than Trustee Grants.
- The average grant per Trustee has grown by almost 50% in the decade.
- Certain themes have been reduced in our granting while others have grown considerably. For example, grants directed toward “pure” recreation have increased while those with environmental, educational development, or cultural development themes have declined somewhat. However, we continue to seek opportunities to fulfill our mission in all of these fields.

LOOKING FORWARD A DECADE

Early this year we asked ourselves this question: “We know we have changed and things around us have changed. What methods of doing business should we consider modifying, if any, so that we may operate most effectively in this changed environment to achieve our mission?”

One of the most unique things about our Foundation is the fact that the Trustees themselves seek out and develop funding opportunities rather than relying on grant request submissions. The Trustees are able to recommend two types of grants each year, the first of which is a “Trustee Grant” of $30,000 awarded to a program typically in the area where they live. The second type of grant is a “Special Grant” that may be as large as $100,000. While the smaller Trustee Grants in some ways can be considered venture capital that allow an organization to try something new, the larger Special Grants are typically given to more mature programs with real growth potential. Both of these types of grants will remain in place as we move forward but, we will also look at new ways of achieving our mission, such as:

- Employing new philanthropic strategies and models that focus Foundation resources in certain areas including childhood obesity, and other issues thereby increasing impact.
- Forming new partnerships with other foundations and organizations that share NRF’s mission and values.
- Developing clear performance measures that validate the return on our investments and inform future grant giving.
- Documenting and publicizing, via the Foundation’s website and other printed materials, effective and creative models funded by the Foundation that capitalize on the transformative nature of recreation.
- Facilitating national replication of effective models that we fund.
- Creating a learning community with Foundation grantees and partners that will enhance the field and build collaboration and collective problem solving.
- Creating a nimble and opportunistic culture within the Foundation that identifies and capitalizes on opportunities that can help advance the Foundation’s mission and strategic priorities.

There are a number of new areas here that excite us a great deal. However, a careful examination of and investment in new areas will take time and we are focused on making the very best use of our grants. Thus we see the next several years as a period of evolution and growth, all focused on creating greater mission impact.

Perhaps the single most important change we have decided to make in answer to the question above and to enable the time consuming and thoughtful investigation of new opportunities is to engage our first full-time Executive Director. This new person will follow in the footsteps of our current Executive Director, Dr. Tony Mobley, who served the Foundation with distinction since starting with us in 2002. Now he has decided to spend more time with his wife Betty, and pursuing his passion of golf. When you review the numbers that characterize our last decade, a great deal of the credit for that growth — and all the good that it has done — belongs to Tony. Tony has helped usher in new Trustees, he has worked extensively with Trustees to select outstanding funding opportunities, and he has worked with many grantees to improve the impact of our funding and their efforts.

Dr. Tony Mobley
Executive Director

Our new Executive Director is Sophie Twichell who will operate out of our new office in Chicago beginning in the fall of 2014.

After receiving her BA in Cultural Anthropology from the University of Pennsylvania, Sophie began her career at The Field Museum in Chicago as a Research Associate and the Coordinator of the Spring Systematics Symposium. She joined the staff of the Lake Michigan Federation (known today as Alliance for the Great Lakes) as Development Associate and moved up to Assistant Director. After graduating with a JD and a certificate in Environmental and Energy Law from Chicago-Kent College of Law, Sophie returned to Field Museum to manage its international conservation programs. She then joined Brushwood Center at Ryerson Woods where she has served as executive director for ten years.

Sophie has an authentic appreciation for our mission. She sees a direct connection between her work preserving, protecting and celebrating natural assets and recreation. Furthermore, her work at Brushwood Center has emphasized outreach to communities of color that have not historically enjoyed nature, the outdoors and recreational spaces. Her creativity and culturally sensitive outreach significantly increased the diversity of people who enjoyed programming at Brushwood Center and area nature preserves.

We all welcome Sophie to the National Recreation Foundation.

A FOUNDATION SUPPORTING YOUTH AND HEALTHY LIFESTYLES

The NRF adopted the emphasis “At-Risk Youth” and “Healthy Lifestyles” over 20 years ago, yet they continue to be issues that our society faces. Young Americans across the country face neglect from their parents, schools, communities and government, which severely constrain their opportunity for leading healthy and productive lives.

Recently the discourse surrounding the overhaul of the U.S. healthcare system has brought greater awareness to the role parks and recreation organizations can play as a tool for preventative healthcare, particularly in regard to the obesity epidemic. Obesity is one of the fastest rising issues related to public health and according to the 2009 Pediatric Nutrition Surveillance System (PedNSS), one of three children are obese or overweight by their fifth birthday. It has also been noted that low-income families are more affected because of limited opportunities for physical activity and healthy food choices. Finding mechanisms through which opportunities for physical activity and healthy lifestyles can be increased, especially for children in low-income households, is at the heart of what the NRF and the numerous non-profit organizations the Foundation works with strive to achieve. Central to this is the idea that recreation participation can lead to reduced rates of obesity and overall healthier lifestyles.

The NRF supports organizations by providing guidance and resources that are critical for changing outcomes, whether related to reducing anti-social behavior and developing a strong citizenship, or increasing activity levels and promoting proper nutrition in youth and young adults. Funding priority is given to those organizations that are working to coordinate efforts among local, state, and national agencies that address these issues, as well as to those programs that focus on outcomes that lead to significant social change.

HISTORY OF FOUNDATION

The history of the foundation began in 1919 with the establishment of the War Camp Community Services, Inc. (WCCS), which was created in response to a need for recreation and other services on the homefront during World War I. By the end of the war, the WCCS fund contained nearly $1.5 million. These funds were subsequently invested in an endowment portfolio that has grown to over $40 million supporting the organization now known as the National Recreation Foundation (NRF). Today, the NRF operates as a private foundation dedicated to working with organizations to increase access to recreational opportunities that use recreation as a tool for improving mental, physical, social and spiritual health.

The NRF Board of Trustees has historically represented diverse geographic areas of the U.S. in order to represent the diverse population of America. Members of the Board have always shared three common bonds: a love of recreation, a deep respect for its value in all our lives, and the belief that high quality recreation programs are vital in fostering social stability and healthy lifestyles in our communities.
GRANT SELECTION PROCESS
Since its inception in 1965, the NRF has actively reviewed and funded grants in two ways: as a Trustee or Special Grant. Every year, each Trustee selects a project they believe fulfills the goals of the NRF. The sponsoring Trustee must propose the project to the Board, and recommendations are made for funding the grant. Trustee Grants are limited to $30,000. The Foundation also accepts proposals from the National Recreation and Parks Association (NRPA) and other pre-selected organizations. It does not accept unsolicited proposals. These grants are not subject to a monetary limit, but may be subject to stricter granting criteria. The Special Grants may be applied for each year, up to three years.

The NRF generally uses the following criteria for evaluating proposals for projects:
1. Grants must be consistent with the NRF Mission statement.
2. Grants are made only to organizations that are tax-exempt under Section 501(c) 3 of the Internal Revenue Code or to governmental agencies. Grants are not made to individuals.
3. Grants are normally not made for (1) capital expenses; (2) overhead costs beyond those needed for effective and efficient administration of the grant programs; or (3) research.
4. Programs that are supported should be innovative within the context in which the recipient organization operates, and should have the potential to contribute to life transformation for disadvantaged youth.
5. Programs must have leverage potential, such as matching funds or the development of partnerships or collaborations, that will enhance a grant’s effectiveness.
6. Programs should be capable of being replicated in other communities or agencies. Grants can be made to facilitate such replication.
7. Grant proposals should show how a program will be sustained at the end of the grant period when it becomes the exclusive responsibility of the grantee.
8. Evaluation measures are required. Outcome rather than output measures are preferred and are expected for larger, special grants. However, the NRF recognizes that the costs associated with measuring outcomes (i.e. what happens to participants as a result of the program) can be constraining and not as feasible for smaller grants.

Typical output measures might include:
(i) Number of participants
(ii) Cost per participant served
(iii) User perceptions of service quality
(iv) User satisfaction levels
(v) Exportability of the innovative program to other contexts

Typical outcome measures might include changes in:
(i) Physical well-being, mental health, or stress levels
(ii) Emotional and social well-being such as self-esteem, social interaction, empathy for others, and self-confidence
(iii) Deviant behaviors
(iv) Life or leisure skills such as educational attainment, acquisition of knowledge, problem solving ability, and cognitive processing
For 60 years, Robert W. Crawford served others through his role as Commissioner of Recreation in Philadelphia and as Executive Director of the National Recreation Foundation. As the Commissioner of Recreation, Mr. Crawford established a national model for local government’s provision of recreational services for all citizens. His creativity and innovative ideas won him international recognition. He also played an important role in the development and growth of the National Recreation Foundation during his time as Executive Director. Mr. Crawford personified those qualities of leadership and commitment that the Foundation seeks to foster, which is why this Achievement Prize was named in his honor.

The purpose of the prize is to recognize a living person who has dedicated him or herself to enhancing recreation opportunities for youth, making it possible for more young Americans to live healthy, participatory lives, thus reinforcing the work of the Foundation. Each year, the prize is awarded to that person, whether professional or volunteer, who has made an extraordinary contribution in advancing recreation programs for at-risk youth.

The prize consists of a $50,000 cash award, $40,000 of which will support the recreation-related work or project of the recipient’s choice. The Individual members of the Foundation’s Board of Trustees may make nominations; the award is presented at the annual meeting of the Board of Trustees.
The National Recreation Foundation is proud to present the 2014 Robert W. Crawford Achievement Prize to Jacqueline Joyner-Kersee. Ms. Joyner-Kersee has made extraordinary contributions to the St. Louis area, and specifically to the community of East St. Louis through the opening of the Jackie Joyner-Kersee Center, a safe haven for young people to learn, play and contribute to their community.

The seven pages to follow this paragraph give us all a short glimpse back over images from years past. The faces remind of us why we are involved. Let us remain steadfast in pursuing our mission for the future of our youth, and know that collectively we have all been a part of their past — shaping something that is immeasurable and of great benefit to us all — bringing dignity and purpose to lives which all matter.
From foster care and adoption to family preservation and mentoring, Orchards Children’s Services considers the welfare of children paramount. NRF funding has supported The Game Changers project and allowed Orchards to target 40-50 middle school youth to receive intensive coaching and camp activities over the span of two summers. Orchards Children’s Services provided focused exposure to areas in which the youth were highly interested or talented with academic and sporting abilities that will serve them for a lifetime. Targeted youth were exposed to specific fields of interest such as art camp, athletic camp and science camp to further their growth and development in their particular area of skill or interest. The addition of the Game Changers component to the already successful Summer Adventures program engaged middle school-aged youth in unique summer camp experiences and community involvement they may otherwise never had the opportunity to experience. SquashBusters expanded their after-school program in Boston to 140 students during 2013. With funding support of the NRF, 28 new 7th grade student participants were recruited from the Timilty and O’Bryant Schools and seven 9th grade student participants from the Fenway High and Boston Green Academy schools. Each new student was able to utilize the center three times a week for 33 weeks and was provided opportunities with squash instruction and competition against private school teams, as well as in local and national tournaments.

The mission of the Texas Partnership for Out of School Time (TXPOST) is to increase the quality and availability of out-of-school time programs in the State of Texas. The National Parks of New York Harbor Conservancy’s mission is to preserve the environment of New York Harbor, promote economic development along the harbor, and create on the waterfront the finest urban recreation and educational national park system in the world. This Grant allowed the expansion of the kayaking and swim program, “Community Kayaks and Swim at Jamaica Bay,” around Jamaica Bay in Brooklyn and Queens, and highlighted nearby Gateway National Recreation Area. This area serves as a resource for outdoor recreation with a knowledgeable and friendly staff. The programs final year of funding continued teaching underserved youth kayaking skills on Jamaica Bay, swimming skills in local pools and also invited attendees to participate in ranger led kayak excursions. NRF/NYHC was also able to expand the number of classes offered as well as locations each year. The program is a broad community engagement effort that will offer active recreation programs to a new audience. After a previous NRF grant funded the Community Kayaks pilot program in 2012, this year’s NRF funding allowed the Harbor Conservancy to scale up the program. BOYS AND GIRLS CLUBS OF AMERICA MILITARY OUTREACH | $60,000 GRANT

The BGCA is dedicated to providing high quality out-of-school time programming for military families and personnel who reside on military bases and institutions. NRF funding deepened and expanded an innovative, dynamic recreational opportunity piloted in 2013. The tennis pilot program provided new activities at 20 facilities domestically and abroad and received great interest, and so the BGCA retained the initial 20 Clubs and added 40 additional Clubs in order to provide two separate seasons of tennis for youth ages 6-18. Tennis demands focus, concentration, discipline and honest character, as well as encouraging healthy lifestyles and physical conditioning. LA PLAZA DE CULTURA Y ARTE: EDIBLE TEACHING GARDEN AND CULINARY ARTS | $60,000 GRANT

LA Plaza requested funding to implement a unique program on “mindfulness,” a form of self-regulation and multi-sensory awareness employed within the Edible Teaching Garden and Culinary Art program. Mindfulness training provided opportunities to work with participants to slow them down, use all of their senses to experience activities, and use the knowledge gained to make informed choices about the food they consume and activities they participate in. The goal of the integrated program increased self-regulation and multi-sensory awareness among students and their families, and enabled them to make better choices toward a healthy lifestyle. This program emphasized the importance of physical activity and healthy food choices with an understanding of Mexican and Mexican-American cultural history and cuisine. This interdisciplinary approach is specifically tied to California state curriculum standards and was designed to engage and excite students. Contact Gustavo Herrera at (213) 542-6244. www.lapca.org

SOS OUTREACH | $60,000 GRANT

SOS Outreach received National Recreation Foundation funding to double the number of youth served in the program in order to sustainably replicate the program in four new locations. SOS Outreach inspired youth to make positive decisions for healthy and successful lives by using outdoor adventure sports for the engagement of youth in a progressive, long-term curriculum that focused on leadership training, goal setting, character development and service-learning projects. The program targeted participants who lived in low-income households, come from single parent families, or have demonstrated poor academic achievement, among other risk factors identified through partnered school districts. NATIONAL RECREATION & PARK ASSOCIATION: COMMIT TO HEALTH | $100,000 GRANT

In the last three years, with the help of NRF funding, the NRPA proposed to fund 30 local park and recreation agencies to implement the “Healthy Eating, Physical Activity” (HEPA) standards. This program positively impacted 3,000 children by providing increased opportunities for physical activity and improved nutrition. To assist agencies with improving the quality and quantity of physical activity and nutrition education, NRPA provided agencies with CATCH Kids Club (CKC), a physical activity and nutrition education program that was designed for elementary and middle school aged children in an after-school or summer setting. Mystic Seaport provided the opportunity for 550 underserved students to participate in the Ship to Shore and Outreach programs (40 are in the Ship to Shore and 510 in Outreach programs). This request aligned well with the NRF’s priorities to support at-risk youth while encouraging the development of citizenship and social skills, stemming anti-social behavior and emphasizing pro-active community lifestyles and values. STONINGTON HARBOR YACHT CLUB SAILING FOUNDATION | $100,000 GRANT

The SHYC has sought continued support for the third year of its scholarship program that has allowed economically, physically, or mentally disadvantaged or at-risk children to participate in annual summer sailing and marine biology programs. The SHYC has expanded services to these disadvantaged populations with the help of the SHYC scholarship program. SHYC facilitates programs such as sailing, focusing on developing the life skills of dependability, independence, self-reliance, confidence, concentration, respect and how to become an effective team member. Furthermore, the program integrated the concepts of “sailing and science” to provide an educational experience teaching children teamwork, self-confidence and respect for the environment that will serve them for a lifetime. Funds were also used to create a manual that can be leveraged to help other recreational non-profits establish themselves and create performance measures to maximize their effectiveness. NRF funding allowed KERA to strive to engage 1,200 low-income families with young children in impoverished areas of Dallas in year-around fitness and nutrition activities through the expansion of the Healthy Families Initiative. Through training, events, and regular exercise activities, this project empowered families to use the resources available in their own neighborhood through all seasons. Six television messages – ‘Fit for Fun’ – will be produced and broadcast in the nation’s fourth most populous area (North Texas). This major project built upon an established partnership with AVANCE-Dallas tapping into the fitness expertise of local experts. KERA is structured as a replicable model and will be shared online, along with a trainer’s guide, for use in other cities. Contact Deanna Collingwood at (214) 740-9281. www.kera.org.

The Cristo Rey Network finished the third year of implementing the comprehensive “Healthy Lifestyles” program to combat the health and wellness challenges facing its students. Cristo Rey consists of 25 college preparatory high schools that serve 7,500 low-income urban youth located across 17 states and the District of Columbia. NRF funding helped pilot the Healthy Lifestyles program in previous years and has helped to strengthen the institutional approach to health as well as the schools’ capacity to provide health and wellness education during their students’ critical years of growth, development and learning. Cristo Rey students were equipped with the knowledge and resources to initiate healthy habits to model for their families and carry with them throughout life. Camp Joy has been providing outdoor experiential programs for inner-city children from the southwest region of Ohio since 1938. Camp Joy’s mission is “helping people grow and succeed through life-long, experience-based learning.” It currently offers five distinct programs that specialize in programming for children from low-income homes and schools, children with medical challenges, foster youth, children with at-risk behavior and children with developmental challenges. NRF funding allowed Camp Joy to significantly increase its capacity to help more of the region’s economically disadvantaged youth live healthier lives and improve their overall well being. With these funds, Camp Joy subsidized the cost for partner agencies that serve youth from low-income backgrounds, including children in foster care. CeaseFire, an initiative of the Chicago Project for Violence Prevention, is a national public health strategy that has been found to reduce shootings and killings. The mission of this organization is to work with community and government partners to reduce violence in all forms, to reduce the rate of killing in the City of Chicago to equal or less than the national rate, and to provide support and guidance to individuals at high risk of involvement in shootings. NRF funding supported a Model Site in Chicago’s West Humboldt Park and helped work towards CeaseFire’s goals of changing the thinking about violence and how to approach it, and reducing shootings and killings within the target population of low-income, at-risk youth and young adults in the city of Chicago. THE TRUST FOR PUBLIC LAND | $100,000 GRANT

The program taught underserved, diverse youth kayaking and swimming skills in local pools, invited the participants to go on ranger-led kayak excursions, and expanded the number of classes offered and locations each year. The program is a broad community engagement effort that offers active recreation programs to a new audience.
